Lewis Students, Faculty, and Staff Embrace New Initiatives to Strengthen International Experiences

president's perspective

The recent recession has certainly produced trying times, and like many others, Lewis students and their families have borne a considerable burden. Nonetheless, we can acknowledge that the University has weathered the recessionary turmoil surprisingly well. Thanks to the generosity of numerous alumni and other donors, we have been in a position to assist many of those students to continue their studies and cope with unprecedented financial strain. At the same time, the University's enrollment has grown to a new record high and we are experiencing sustained momentum toward our vision of the University's preferred future development.

Lewis is steadily developing into a regional university of distinction, serving a growing and more diverse population throughout the Chicagoland region and well beyond. Our Mission is clear, our Lasallian and Catholic heritage is vibrant, and the quality of our academic and other programs is demonstrably improving in ways ever more evident. We have nearly 6,000 undergraduate and graduate students, with a record residential population as well. The University's sixth off-campus site, located in Albuquerque, N.M. has been successfully launched, and we are nicely progressing in the provision of courses and entire degree programs online. Accreditation and reaccreditation initiatives are going well. Meanwhile, we continue selectively to develop new and enriched academic programs that are of high quality, are responsive to the needs of the regions we serve, and can attract well-prepared students who will graduate and move onto further studies and into relevant and meaningful careers.

We wish to pursue various campus enhancements in a prudent manner but also with strategic purpose, as we invest in well-qualified personnel, contemporary academic technology, program enrichment and excellent facilities. The planned Science Center will be pivotal in developing further our impressive programs in the natural sciences, mathematics and computer science, psychology, nursing and health care professions. We are already well into a two-phased enhancement and expansion of our College of Nursing building. There are exciting plans in place for a major upgrade of the Oremus Fine Arts Center. Further improvements are under consideration for our College of Education and College of Business facilities. We also will require additional and improved areas for food services, housing, student recreation and intercollegiate athletics during the next several years. All of this will be gradually achieved within the framework of our refined Strategic Plan and Campus Master Plan.

Thank you for investing in the dynamic and impactful future of Lewis University. We are very appreciative for the contributions made by our outstanding alumni. As the University grows and achieves new levels of excellence, the reputation of your degree is further enhanced. More importantly, you will have additional academic programs and resources available in your own ongoing education and for that of your family members. Above all, you can take pride in the contributions that Lewis is making to the continued transformation of our society. These include the promotion of a more informed citizenry; the education of ethical and moral decision-makers; and the preparation of responsible and intellectually capable professionals, who care greatly about the quality of life for all people and who effectually respond with compassion, competence and resourcefulness to the critical needs of the less advantaged.

Sincerely,

Br. James Gaffney, FSC

Fulbright Scholars Use Creativity to Enhance Global Learning

Social media brings U.S.-Mexico students together

Rebeca Rodríguez Minor received a little help from Google in enlightening American students about Latin American culture, history, economics and politics during the fall semester. The Fulbright scholar utilized a Google social media tool that enabled her Lewis University Latin American Issues students to communicate with a dozen students at Universidad del Caribe in Cancún, Mexico.

A September 14 video conference between the American class and Mexican class initiated the experience. The students introduced themselves to each other and shared their goals for the semester of communication. Students in both classes then continued the conversation online through a blog as they discussed various topics such as family, immigration, culture and customs.

"Some of the discussions were very heated. There are strong opinions on both sides of the issues," said Kristin Murray, political science major from Joliet. A conversation about NAFTA was particularly tense which enhanced their understanding of the issue, added Murray. She said the strong beliefs on both sides inspired the students to look deeper into the issue in order to defend their opinions.

Nelida Arellano, an elementary education major from Chicago, said the discussions helped her in understanding the human side of challenges that she might read about in books and news media. She mentioned that one Mexican student touched her heart by discussing how drug trafficking affects her everyday life. The Mexican student had shared with the Lewis students how she can't walk in her own community because she lives in fear of nearby drug traffickers.

Meanwhile, Alexandra Georgious, a criminal/social justice and sociology major from Lockport, was impressed with how the Mexican students are more aware of the United States than the United States students are aware of Mexico. As an example, she recalled a discussion about the First Amendment. She laughed and said, "They knew more about our American political system than I did."

The students enjoyed another special video conference in November with elementary students at Colegio Weston in Playa del Carmen. Representatives from second through fifth grade explained to the Lewis students the traditions associated with the Day of the Dead. Minor commented, "I thought the Lewis students would enjoy hearing about the tradition from children who are currently celebrating it."

Minor has a bachelor's degree in Latin American Studies from UNAM University, Mexico City, and a master's degree in international relations from Universiteit van Amsterdam in the Netherlands. Minor, a Fulbright intern, is currently working on her dissertation for a doctorate degree in Latin American Studies with a focus on regional integration at UNAM University.

Middle Eastern Scholar Translates Love of Learning

Al Zahra Al Hajri, who is from Oman, taught Arabic this fall and shared her perspective on her home country's language, culture and people as part of the Fulbright Foreign Language Teaching academic year at Lewis University.
Assistant (FLTA) Program during the 2009-2010

Teaching English-speaking students how to speak Arabic is a bit different for Al Hajri, who is used to teaching English to Arabic-speaking students. But Al Hajri said she loves the challenge and is eager to help American students reach a better understanding of her culture. She said the common understanding is essential in today's world when technologies enable better communications.

FLTA is sponsored by the U.S. Department of State Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs and administered by the Institute of International Education. The program is designed to assist young educators to refine their teaching skills and increase English language proficiency while pursuing non-degree studies at U.S. institutions of higher education.

Before arriving on the Lewis campus, Al Hajri taught English at an elementary school in Oman. Al Hajri earned a bachelor's degree in teaching English as foreign language in 2005 at Al-Yarmouk University in Jordan.

Although Al Hajri enjoys teaching, she is also determined to continue learning as a student. She is enrolled in French classes at Lewis University while she is working on a master's degree.

Business Expands its International Initiatives to Brazil

Dr. Ian V. Gladding, who was awarded a 2002 Fulbright grant to teach international business in China, and current Professor in the College of Business, and Dr. Frank Rose, Associate Professor of Finance, spent some time over the summer in Brazil, seeking new ways to expand learning opportunities for Lewis students and finding new business opportunities for local companies. The trip, funded by a U.S. Department of Education grant, provided the Lewis faculty the opportunity to meet with Brazilian businesses, government agencies, and educational institutions, with a particular priority given to building upon existing relationships with universities in the global Lasallian university network.

"Since Brazil is now the largest economy in South America and sixth largest in the world, it is an increasingly important destination for American businesses for partners, sources of high quality goods, and as competitors. Knowledge and understanding of Brazil will be increasingly important for Will County companies competing in the global marketplace and for students interested in international careers," commented Dr. Gladding.

The focus on Brazil this year is part of the College of Business initiative to provide international business services to the community and help create local jobs by leveraging faculty expertise and experience through the global Lasallian network. Dr. Rose and Dr. Gladding met with universities, economic development agencies and companies in Sao Paolo, Porto Alegre, and Rio de Janeiro to try to find new international business opportunities for companies and new learning opportunities and practical experience for Lewis students in Brazil.

A highlight of the trip was when Dr. Gladding and Dr. Rose were invited to a meeting/luncheon hosted by the U.S. Ambassador to Brazil in Sao Paolo, attended by a number of large American multinationals operating in the country. The meeting was related to the "+Unidos" effort, initiated in 2006 by the Ambassador to Brazil to promote corporate social responsibility programs in Brazil that contributed to sustainable development.

The two Lewis faculty were warmly welcomed by the two Lasallian Universities and found that Lewis and the two Brazilian Universities UNILASALLE-Canoas (located in Porto Alegre in the south of Brazil) and UNILSALLE-Niteroi (located near Rio de Janeiro) had a great deal in common. UNILASALLE Canoas and UNILSALLE Niteroi offers various service learning projects to help solve social and economic problems in poor communities, are dedicated to excellence in teaching by offering unique, practical academic programs, and dedicated to educating the poor. Like Lewis, UNILASALLE Canoas is a leading regional university located in an area of Brazil that is growing economically. The region, similar in size and economic development objectives to Will County, is also seeking partnerships and offers opportunities for Will County companies to do business in Brazil.

College of Business international initiatives planned for 2010 include student travel study trips to Dubai, India and Brazil.

Education Faculty Provide Professional Development to Lithuanian Teachers

Six College of Education faculty members traveled to Vilnius, Lithuania, over the summer as part of a grant from the American Professional Partnership for Lithuanian Education (APPLE) to provide professional development to Lithuanian teachers. Dr. Deborah Augsburger, Chair, Reading and Literacy; Dr. Dorene Huvaere, Chair, Secondary Education/Technology; Dr. Pam Jessee, Director of Undergraduate Combined Special Education/Elementary Education program; Dr. Barbara Mackey, Associate Professor, Director of English as a Second Language Program - Educational Leadership; Dr. Suzanne O'Brien, Assistant Professor of Elementary Education; and Dr. Jeanette M. Mines, Dean of the College of Education, spent two weeks working with teachers and administrators from across Lithuania.

"Social Responsibility in a Changing World" was the theme of this year's professional development. The classes that the Lewis faculty offered focused on strengthening collaboration for social responsibility in the classroom, the community and the world. A Lithuanian interpreter translated the Lewis faculty's presentations for the twoweek period. The theme is complementary to the College of Education's goals. Working together with the Lithuanian teachers, the Lewis faculty shared ideas of how to foster a learning community and promote social responsibility first within the classroom and then to the community at large. Drs. Augsburger, Mackey and O'Brien worked with elementary teachers, special educators, social workers and administrators while Drs. Huvaere, Jessee and Mines shared ideas with secondary educators. Using a co-teaching approach, the teams modeled collaboration and offered examples of how they work to foster a sense of community in their classrooms.

Each attendee to the Lewis session received a care package of school supplies. The Lewis faculty traveled with six 40-pound bags of school supplies for the Lithuanian educators. Huvaere added, "We hope the Lithuanian students can utilize these supplies and we hope they can pass along the good deed to someone else in the future."

Before the trip to Lithuania, the faculty visited the Lithuanian World Center in Lemont and met with a local professional who has been a part of the APPLE work for many years. The faculty plan to continue a relationship with APPLE and the local Lithuanian community.

International Student Services Expands Recruiting Efforts

Several new initiatives were set into motion this summer by the Office of International Student Services. "A significant international student population on campus not only benefits the foreign students obtaining a quality American education, but also broadens the horizons of the locally-based students on campus," commented Michael Fekete, Director of International Student Services.

Over the summer, Lewis elevated its relationship to become a university partner with ELS American Education Center, a recruitment center for students mainly from China, Turkey and Vietnam. It was with this organization that Fekete recently increased awareness about Lewis as he visited several ELS sites in Turkey and China. He also attended educational fairs, visited with governmental officials and met with agents representing Lewis during an October visit. Fekete said, "This relationship with ELS American Education Center has the potential to increase our relationships around the world and facilitate a number of opportunities, such as alumni gatherings, faculty discussions and more."

Lewis also became a charter member of IDP (International Direct Placement) Education. The world's largest student placement firm is set to similarly increase the awareness of Lewis around the globe. Fekete emphasized, "This is just another tool we need to compete in the global economy for students. This company has had much success in Australia and its expansion into America is expected to be beneficial to the few universities that are charter members."

International students at Lewis University represent more than 30 countries.

Lewis is also in the application process to become members of the American International Recruitment Council (AIRC). The newly formed AIRC develops standards for ethical recruitment of international students, develops best practices and training for overseas student recruitment agents and is establishing a framework for certification of agents. "This organization is expected to assist us as we travel the globe in search of students that are a good match for Lewis University. It is expected to make the United States schools more viable in a competitive global marketplace of higher education," added Fekete.

Lewis Welcomes Iraqi Student

Lewis University is among 30 institutions in the United States participating in the Iraqi Student Project this year. Shay is the first student enrolled in this grassroots effort to educate students who will return to their country and become contributing members of Iraqi society.

"We are grateful and privileged that this project has enabled us to extend a helping hand to an Iraqi student," stated Brother James Gaffney, FSC, President of Lewis University. "This is a natural extension of our Lasallian tradition of assisting well-deserving but needy students who otherwise would lack an opportunity for a high quality Catholic and Lasallian education. We feel truly blessed that Shay is now part of our Lewis University Community."

Months before Shay's arrival, a support group formed at Lewis University to plan for his success at the Midwestern Lasallian institution. About 40 faculty, staff members and students rallied efforts behind fundraising and logistical support. The support group extended a helping hand in many ways; donating items for the student's room, scheduling time for hosting Shay during academic breaks, and arranging events on campus to raise funds to assist in meeting the student's expenses.

"The exceptional, stand-out thing about Lewis is that the support for Shay is coming from the school itself. This is most unusual. Usually a support group forms from outside the university. Faculty, administration and staff have gathered with Shay for this support," commented Jane Pitz, U.S. Executive Director of the Iraqi Student Project.

Rome Provides Attractive Option for Two Students Studying Abroad

Julia Drozd studied this year at John Cabot University in Rome. Although her course schedule was busy, she managed to find a way to assist others while enjoying this valuable experience. She said, "I was able to visit a refugee center to help teach English and to keep the refugees company."

Drozd also broadened her horizons by attending human rights events at John Cabot University. She said, "Getting outside perspectives on many different issues was very important and beneficial; this knowledge will undoubtedly help me in my future career. The information I got in class was very important, but the knowledge I have gained from everyday life here cannot be taught in school."

Drozd was fairly comfortable traveling on trains and planes to visits the sites of Europe when she needs a break from studies. She said, 'It has been an extremely culturally enriching experience where I have not only seen so many different things but met so many different, interesting people."

Drozd is a double major in psychology and political science. She said she enjoyed the people the most through her international experience. She commented, "I have met so many different people here; not only Italians, but a lot of people from all over the world that were just backpacking and 'stopping by' in Rome. It was also a good way of networking; many people know people that are working in fields I am interested in and have helped me get in contact with them."

Jillian Reiher's wish came true to return to Rome after a previous three-week visit there eight years ago. She studied psychology, philosophy, and Italian in Rome. The junior psychology major had a hard time finding the words to describe her experience. Reiher said, "How could I possibly describe living next door to the Pantheon, or being able to walk to the Coliseum if I'm bored or need a study break? Studying in Italy has been all at once one of the most maddening and rewarding experiences of my life."

Jillian Reiher

Reiher has family roots in Italy and she has always enjoyed learning about her heritage. However, she believes this international experience will help her future career. She said, "I plan to pursue a career in either school or child counseling. The study abroad experience will give me a broader view of the world and its cultures and a better understanding of people in general."

International Scholarship Brings Lewis Student to Spain

Alejandra Vaca studied in Seville, Spain as a recipient of the Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarship. The Gilman Scholarship is funded by Congress and sponsored by the U.S. Department of State to assist undergraduate students in participating in a study abroad program.

While in Seville, Vaca studied Spanish language and culture at the Center for Cross-Cultural Study. Vaca also enrolled in additional coursework at the University of Seville. Her studies are facilitated through a program that is part of the Lasallian International Programs Consortium and coordinated by St. Mary's University of Minnesota. She said, "I would describe my experience as a breathtaking dream! I'm happy to have had the opportunity to learn so much of the Spanish culture while enhancing my native language."

The diverse learning environment of Lewis University prepared Vaca for her international experience. She said, "Since Lewis is a diverse campus, it has allowed me to be open minded about the cultural differences."

Vaca also noted that her involvement in student leadership prepared her in approaching new people and situations. After being a resident assistant on campus, she looks at the new things in a more positive light.

The 22-year-old resident of Chicago's Little Village plans on becoming a high school guidance counselor after graduating with a degree in psychology. She hopes to use her fluency in Spanish and English to help her future students and families. Vaca said, "It is significant to communicate professionally with parents about their child; to give parents a full understanding of absences, tardiness, cutting class, and report cards. I believe that many students fall between the cracks because parents are not fully aware of what is occurring at school due to the language barrier."

The Octavio Frias de Oliveira bridge, a cable-stayed bridge in São Paulo, Brazil over the Pinheiros River, opened in May 2008.

Brazil's Hot Market Attracts Lewis Student

Rubi Renovato studied in Sao Paulo, Brazil. The 21-year-old student was raised in Guadalajara, Mexico, for the first 10 years of her life until her family moved to the United States. She said, "The language is very different from English, but with Spanish as my native language it has helped a great deal in learning the language faster. I'm fascinated by the culture; from the food to the music, to their people."

The marketing major has a minor in finance with plans to graduate in May 2010. Hoping to specialize in the Latin American market, she studied international business at Fundacao Getulio Vargas in Sao Paulo. She said, "One of the major economic forces in Latin America is Brazil, which is also one of the BRIC economic forces of the Goldman Sachs model. Sao Paulo is the business center of Brazil, so there's no better place to learn about this country's business than Sao Paulo."

She also recognizes how understanding other cultures and customs affects a person's perspective. She commented, "You become more tolerant and mature; you learn another perspective."

December Commencement Honors

Lewis University awarded honorary degrees to three distinguished professionals at its winter Commencement Ceremonies. Honorees included Illinois Supreme Court Justice, Third Judicial District, the Honorable Thomas Kilbride; Director of Argonne National Laboratory and President of UChicago Argonne, LLC, Eric D. Isaacs, Ph.D.; and, President Emeritus, College of Santa Fe, Brother Donald C. Mouton, FSC, STD. The honorary degree recipients were recognized along with the nearly 670 graduates who were awarded degrees throughout the weekend's ceremonies.

Named Judge of the Year in 2009, Illinois Supreme Court Justice Thomas Kilbride became interested in social justice as a young man studying at Bishop McNamara High School. After graduating from high school, he worked with Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers Union, where he advised people bargaining for fair labor conditions. He saw "firsthand how working within the law could positively impact lives of working families" and focused his interests toward a career in law.

Justice Kilbride's firm commitment to service and social responsibility was furthered at St. Mary's College, now University, and at Antioch School of Law, which was founded to train attorneys for advocacy in the public interest. Justice Kilbride began his career in law in 1981 as a Legal Aid attorney for low-income clients. While practicing law for 20 years in Rock Island, he remained committed to working on behalf of the marginalized and for those who otherwise did not have a voice.

An active volunteer, he served as a legal advisor for the Community Caring Conference, for Quad-City Harvest, for the Children's Disability Project, and for various other neighborhood associations. Since his election to the Illinois Supreme Court in 2000, Justice Kilbride's work has been recognized with numerous service awards.

A distinguished physicist, educator, and national leader in science research, Eric D. Isaacs, Ph.D., was recently appointed as Director of the U.S. Department of Energy's Argonne National Laboratory. Argonne Laboratory is among the Department of Energy's largest and most diverse national laboratories. Dr. Isaacs previously served as Director of Argonne National Laboratory's Center for Nanoscale Materials and as Argonne's Deputy Laboratory Director for Programs.

In his new role as Argonne's Director, Dr. Isaacs will help implement the Laboratory's strategic plan, leading Argonne in strengthening science research and development efforts that underlie key national imperatives: energy security, environmental stability, economic competitiveness, and national security. He is also a prominent physicist at the University of Chicago's James Franck Institute, where he continues to conduct research in collaboration with a team of students in other Argonne divisions.

Dr. Isaacs received a doctorate in Physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the field of magnetic semiconductors and was a postdoctoral fellow at Bell Laboratories. He has served on numerous scientific advisory committees and is author or co-author of more than 140 scientific papers and presentations.

During his lifelong journey in Lasallian and Catholic education, Brother Donald Mouton, FSC, has been a student, a teacher, and an administrator. Over many years, he has traveled far from his home state of Louisiana to such places as Canada, France, Italy, and many other global destinations, primarily for advanced degrees and to give scholarly presentations internationally. His Lasallian education began at Cathedral High School in Lafayette, Louisiana, which is sponsored by the De La Salle Christian Brothers. After entering the Christian Brothers Scholasticate in New Mexico in 1954, Brother Donald received a Bachelor of Arts in Mathematics from the College of Santa Fe in 1956. He then taught high school, first in Louisiana and later in Montreal, Canada. Later, he attended the Catholic University of Paris, where he earned his Doctorate in Sacred Theology.

In 1971, Brother Donald began at the College of Santa Fe as an Assistant Professor of Religious Studies. He went on to serve as Associate Professor, Professor, Department Chair and, from 1982 to 1987, as the College's fourth President. In 1988, he began a new phase of his educational journey, participating in the International Session of Lasallian Studies in Rome.

For decades, Brother Donald has sought to enrich educational and faith-based institutions, as well as society in general. He has served on numerous boards. He has also worked with the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools as a Consultant-Evaluator and as a member of its Accreditation Review Council. He has served as a member of the U.S. Catholic Bishops' Advisory Council, including as its chair, and he has played a role in important initiatives of the Regional Conference of Christian Brothers. Brother Donald's exemplary service has been widely recognized.

Undergraduates Honored for Achievements

Kailin O'Connell received the Father Aquinas Colgan Award at the University's undergraduate commencement ceremonies on December 20. She graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Elementary Education. O'Connell earned a 3.3/4.0 cumulative Grade Point Average (GPA). Originally a nursing major, O'Connell switched to education her sophomore year when she discovered that she had a "hidden passion for teaching." Her dislike of public speaking had held her back from a career in education, but she credits her experiences at Lewis with helping her overcome this obstacle. She stated, "...with the help of my education courses, and the countless campus events I have been a part of, I have been forced out of my shell...while I am still a little shy about public speaking, it does not affect me at all in the classroom."

She also credited the University for helping her grow spiritually. "Some of the most wonderful memories derive from the time when I had the pleasure of being involved with the Koinonia retreats offered at Lewis," recalled O'Connell. "I found the joy in enriching the spirits of others and giving them hope at Koinonia," she continued.

Cody Roberts was selected to present the student Lasallian address at the undergraduate ceremony. Roberts graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Human Resource Management and a Business Studies minor with a 3.8 cumulative Grade Point Average (GPA). Roberts was on the Deans' List all semesters. He also was a member of several student organizations while attending the University including serving as president of the Society of Human Resource Management, and a member of STAND for Human Rights.

Roberts spent several months teaching English in Beijing, China, and participated in the travel study abroad program, earning a one-year diploma from the Beijing Language and Culture University. He also held internships during his time at Lewis, working at Harris Private Bank/BMO Enterprises in Chicago and at the Will County Health Department as a human resource intern.

Roberts stated, "It is our responsibility to embrace our Lasallian values to create change and provide solutions, as future leaders of our organizations, institutions and the social systems in which we operate." Further, Roberts believes that we are obligated to be socially responsible to the poor and disadvantaged through the promotion of justice in our lives and vocations.

President's Circle Honors Prodehls and Empress Casino

Lewis University hosted its 14th annual President's Circle dinner on December 4. The annual Frank J. Lewis Philanthropist of the Year Awards honored Edward and Sandra Prodehl and the Empress Casino. The awards are named for Frank J. Lewis, Chicago industrialist and major benefactor, who provided significant funding and support for the University from its founding in 1932 until his death in 1960.

Edward and Sandra Prodehl have demonstrated consistent dedication to others throughout their community through business and civic leadership as well as volunteer service. Ed began his career in the beverage industry, and later became owner of Coldwell Banker Honig-Bell, the top producing Coldwell Banker brokerage in Illinois. He has been extensively involved in the community as a member of Lockport Main Street, past President of the Will-Grundy Association of Realtors, and through his involvement in the Lockport –area land development company SIBAKIS. Ed has been a member of the Lewis University Board of Trustees since 2002 and is Co-Chair of the Campaign for Lewis University.

For 20 years Sandra was the owner of a travel agency, supporting Ed in his real estate business and raising four children. She is a former member of the Lockport Women's Club and has provided valued service and leadership for the Lewis University Cultural Advisory Board. Together, Ed and Sandy have made an impact throughout the region, providing philanthropic support for many causes in many of communities where their company offices are located. Their support encourages others to give, and they have funded various projects at St. Dennis Parish Center in Lockport and most recently at Lewis University, including a major renovation of the Student Union Center.

Empress Casino has benefited many local organizations from its philanthropy including Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Easter Seals, Unity Community Development Corporation, Empress Casino also supports many national organizations, including the American Cancer Society, Wish Upon a Star Foundation, United Way and the United Negro College Fund. Empress supports organizations that help young people by donating to the Toys on Parade campaign and the Joliet-area U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots. It also provides funding for annual scholarships for Lewis University students.

In March 2009, a fire destroyed an area of the casino and it was forced to close the pavilion building, effecting the jobs of many workers. In a campaign called "Empress Gives Back," the Casino encouraged its employees to provide volunteer support to the local community while Empress continued to pay their salaries. Empress employees have performed over 5,270 community service hours in 2009 for more than 30 organizations including the Will County Historical Society, Habitat for Humanity, Catholic Charities, the Joliet Park District, Campfire and the Joliet Area Community Hospice.

Environmental Responsibility Encouraged Campus-wide

With more than 370 acres of land, Lewis has always been a good steward of the environment. From 1979 to 1989 the late Brother Ambrose Groble, FSC, planted 198 trees from 36 species. Today there are more than 60 varieties of deciduous trees on the main campus. Recent initiatives have been organized to raise more awareness of our responsibility as a community to conserve and enhance our resources.

Green Up, Clean Up

The University Environment and Energy Conservation Council hosted "Green Up, Clean Up" September 26 on the main campus. More than two dozen students, faculty and staff members removed Common Buckthorn trees from the Burnham Centennial Nature Trail. The Common Buckthorn tree is an invasive species, explained Danielle Cockream, Lewis' student sustainability coordinator. The non-native tree establishes itself quickly and dominates an area. The coordinator of the event said, "This is a problem because it does not allow new native species to establish and can kill off some of the other trees in the area."

The removal process included techniques to ensure the Buckthorns did not return. The volunteers cut down premarked Buckthorn trees and then the Grounds Department applied chemicals to the trunks to prevent them from growing back. Another "Green Up, Clean Up" is scheduled for spring 2010.

Dorothy Day Residence Hall Room

New Residence Hall Incorporates Green Technologies

Dorothy Day Residence Hall opened this fall, the 12th residence hall on campus. Named in honor of the late social activist who founded the Catholic Worker Movement, the four-story residence hall incorporates many of the latest environmentally-friendly technologies.

Donald Castello, Director of Facilities and a designated Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Accredited Professional, said that recycled materials were used in construction of the building; paints and other surface covering made from low emission materials were utilized to reduce indoor air contaminants; and energy consumption reduction features were designed into the building's exterior, windows and primary building heating, ventilation and cooling systems. The hall is connected to a centrally located HVAC Digital Control System that monitors systems around the clock and makes changes in temperature remotely as needed. A bio-swale system located near the parking lot filters pollutants from storm water runoff. There also is an eco-friendly lighting system that operates with occupancy sensor lighting plus locations on each floor designated for recycling.

Dorothy Day Hall is the third new residence hall constructed on the Lewis main campus in the past four years to meet a burgeoning student population. The building has an additional level compared to the similar structures of Pope John Paul II Hall and Mother Teresa Hall, built in 2005 and 2006 respectively. Dorothy Day Hall can accommodate approximately 130 residents. It includes four floors of apartment-style living space with each floor consisting of single and double occupancy rooms, two study/conference areas, a lounge area, laundry facilities, and a kitchen. The first floor also has a game room and offers an expanded kitchen facility. The lower level of the building is being utilized for additional classrooms, office space and meeting areas.

Recent Aircraft Donations Provide New Learning Opportunities

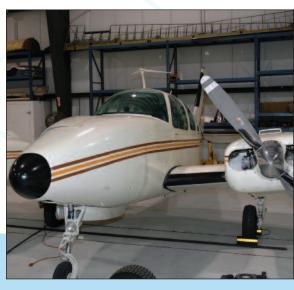

Lewis University's fleet of airplanes recently increased as the University received three donations. Sheldon Bell donated a Cirrus (SR-22) aircraft. Dr. Richard Burns provided a Beechcraft Baron (E-55) plane. Scot Severson offered a Super Sport Trainer.

"We are truly appreciative of the three different aircrafts. They expand the learning opportunities we can provide our students as they prepare for careers in aviation flight, aviation administration, aviation maintenance and air traffic control," commented Bill Brogan '93, Chair of the Department of Aviation and Transportation Studies.

"It's a real good plane," commented Bell about the Cirrus SR-22 that he donated. The former Director of the First National Bank of Joliet said the composite aircraft was "revolutionary" in its design and use of materials. The aviation enthusiast said the aircraft has been the best selling single engine, four-seat plane on the market for several years.

The 310 horsepower engine hummed smoothly as Bell flew the Cirrus to his second home in Florida many times. He laughed and said, "I can be home in six hours."

Although the sun has set on the sunny Florida days for the Cirrus, Bell was glowing with the idea that Lewis University students could benefit from working on and flying a different airplane. He said, "I think they do a good job of teaching their students, and I know they could use the plane."

With an excited tone in his voice, Dr. Burns proudly boasted about his donation already being utilized by Lewis University students. He said, "They're already working on it and taking it apart."

Dr. Burns, a neurosurgeon, piloted the twin-engine piston powered aircraft to many destinations over the years to go scuba diving. He purchased the aircraft in the 1960s from Anheuser-Busch, Inc. He said there were a few occasions when he had been mistaken for one of the Busch family members, who supposedly had flown in the plane before his ownership of it.

Severson might not have had any celebrities own his donated Super Sport Trainer plane, but he certainly felt the previous owner was a hero. The construction of the single-engine piston powered aircraft was started by Severson's father, Don. Severson recalled a fond memory of his father welding the fuselage in the 1980s. About 25 years later, Severson acquired his parents' property and inherited his father's passion for aviation. Over the next three years, he completed the construction of the plane. He eventually put more than 100 hours of flying time on the aircraft.

Severson donated the family heirloom to Lewis University with hopes that the plane would be valuable to aviation maintenance students. He said, "I had a wonderful experience building the airplane and I hope now people can learn from it."

Community Responds to Need for Mission Fund

Since the establishment late last year of the Lewis Mission Fund for Student Financial Assistance, nearly $230,000 has been raised in gifts and pledges to assist current students who are facing severe financial challenges.

Record numbers of alumni gifts were received throughout 2009 in support of the Mission Fund. Generous parents of Lewis students have made more than 370 gifts and pledges totaling more than $23,000 to help classmates of their sons and daughters. Lewis faculty and staff have also made substantial commitments to helping their students through the Mission Fund, with 153 gifts and pledges totaling more than $17,000. This is in addition to other very generous gifts to specific scholarships and causes made by faculty throughout the year.

Charitable Foundation Endowed Scholarship.

Firmly committed to reinvestment in the communities they serve, First Midwest has long been a loyal partner with Lewis University in helping to ensure that a quality Lewis education is available to deserving students, regardless of economic standing. The First Midwest Bank and Lewis partnership was strengthened under the guidance of former Bank CEO and Chairman, John O'Meara, who together with his wife Cheryl, established the Cheryl & John O'Meara Foundation Endowed Scholarship prior to John's death in 2008.

Federal Funding Aids Nursing Undergraduate Students

Lewis University received a grant of $43,361 from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) Grant Program Scholarships for Disadvantaged Students (SDS). The scholarships are designated for full-time undergraduate students who are in certain ways educationally disadvantaged as a result of economic background or education/environmental barriers. The funding also will complement Lewis University's ongoing efforts to recruit and retain qualified nursing students from diverse backgrounds.

"The grant for scholarships came at a time when state need-based funding for college students was reduced," stated Brother James Gaffney, FSC, President. Reaching out to needy students is reflective of our Mission, and we continue to seek ways to help our students."

Additional funding through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 made it possible for Lewis to award scholarships to all economically disadvantaged full-time nursing undergraduate students who were at risk of discontinuing their studies for financial reasons.

Proposed Rendering of the Science Center Building

Crown Family Philanthropies Provides $50,000 to Science Center

Lewis University is extremely grateful for a generous contribution of $50,000 received from the Crown Family Philanthropies, which will be directed to the Science Center building and expansion project. Lester Crown and the Crown family have had a long-term association with Lewis University, dating back nearly 70 years to the donation of 147 acres of land to the then Lewis School of Aeronautics in 1942, which nearly doubled the size of the campus. The Crown family was recognized at the 8th Annual Signum Fidei Gala in 2006 as one of the University's most generous and consistent benefactors.

Physics Department Receives Equipment

A very generous gift of equipment was made to the Lewis University
Physics Department by Newport
Corporation in Irvine, Calif. This laser and optical equipment will provide Lewis students with new opportunities for learning and experimentation. Dr.
Charles Crowder, Associate Professor of Physics, assisted in making this generous gift possible.

The College of Nursing building underwent renovation over the summer to provide additional classrooms and a state-of-the-art nursing simulation lab due to the generosity of an anonymous donor. This will allow Lewis to enroll greater numbers of students in the highly acclaimed program, the largest undergraduate nursing program in the state. Enrollment in the program had been capped previously, and expanded facilities were needed in order to help address the statewide nursing shortage.

IBHE Grant to Improve Nursing Retention Through Simulation

A two-phase strategy designed to provide additional support for students through clinical simulation began this fall in the College of Nursing and Health Professions. The first step is targeted at first semester sophomore students, who have been identified as being at risk of failure or withdrawal. Faculty will conduct weekly lab simulations for sophomores. The second stage includes all nursing students. Faculty have the option to refer any student at risk to the lab for remediation and clinical makeup time.

"Research shows that connecting didactic learning in the classroom to clinical simulation improves student acquisition and retention of knowledge better than the traditional lecture format," commented Dr. Peggy Rice, Dean of the College of Nursing and Health Professions.

Rita Amerio, Director of Undergraduate Studies, led the initiative to implement more clinical simulation lab opportunities for students attending the state's largest bachelor's degree program in nursing. She commented, "We hope to help our students become better professionals by practicing their skills in the safe environment of the clinical simulation lab."

A $35,240 Improvement Grant from the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Nursing School Grant Program energized the "Improving Retention Through Clinical Simulation" project at Lewis. The funding enabled Lewis to purchase National League for Nursing Learning modules and other simulation lab equipment, provide stipends for project management and additional faculty training and attendance at the National Conference on Nursing Skills Labs in St. Louis, Mo.

Johnson and Johnson Grant to Benefit Nursing Students

The Campaign for Nursing's Future sponsorship support of $5,500 will assist the University as it addresses critical issues by developing an informative series for BAC-BSN (Bachelor's to BSN) students.

The series will feature presentations by successful alumni of the BAC-BSN program and other nursing professionals, especially those from underrepresented and/or disadvantaged backgrounds. Workshops on transitioning into a new career in nursing, seeking and benefiting from academic support services as well as addressing financial and other life challenges that may hinder success will be offered. Sponsored activities will include: the development and distribution of recruitment materials including information on financial aid opportunities; a series of informative workshops for potential and enrolled BAC-BSN students; and targeted networking events to develop and foster mentoring relationships and social support between Lewis BAC-BSN alumni, other nursing professionals, and current Lewis BAC-BSN students.

The Campaign for Nursing's Future is a resource for potential students, current students, and nursing schools. More information is available at the Johnson and Johnson Web site, www.discovernursing.com

Donald '56 (Accounting) and Suellen Cordano have made a generous gift of $25,000 to establish The F. James Staszak Endowed Scholarship in honor of former Professor and Dean of the College of Business, Dr. Francis James Staszak. Mr. Cordano was also a faculty member in the College of Business in the Department of Accountancy for more than 30 years. The newly created scholarship will be awarded to a Lewis University student enrolled as a College of Business major.

In addition to establishing the Staszak Scholarship, the Cordanos have also provided significant additional funding in the amount of $25,000 for the The Donald L. Cordano Endowed Scholarship, established in 2005.

The University hopes to raise an additional $300,000 by way of The Cordano Challenge through gifts to the endowed scholarships of Cordano and Staszak, as well as Professor Emeritus Roger Ashamy, who taught accountancy at Lewis for 27 years. Board of Trustees Treasurer and former College of Business Professor John Eudes has generously responded with a $26,000 gift to the Staszak Scholarship. #### Italian-American Student Scholarships Funded

A $25,000 gift was received from the American Scholarship Fund, which has been directed to the Joliet Chapter of UNICO Endowed Scholarship Fund of Lewis University. The UNICO scholarship is provided to a Lewis student of Italian descent who possesses a GPA of 3.0 or greater, shows a record of community involvement and has demonstrated financial need. The American Scholarship Fund was founded by Shorewood resident, Victor Corsetti, an Italian immigrant who benefitted from a UNICO scholarship while attending the University of Illinois. Thanks to the contributions of Mr. Corsetti, other family members, friends, the Italian-American Commercial Club, and administrative assistance provided by Mr. Paul Fazio, the American Scholarship Fund has been able to provide scholarship support to deserving students since it was founded approximately 25 years ago.

1994 Alumna Provides Gift in Will

Dr. Byung-In Seo '94 has made a generous planned gift commitment to Lewis through her estate plans. She strongly believes in the value of a Lasallian education and credits her own difficulty in being able to obtain funds as a graduate student at Lewis as the motivating factor of giving back. "If I can change the life of only one student, I have been true to the Lasallian Mission." Regarding her planned gift to Lewis and her new status as a member of the Harold E. White Legacy Society, Dr. Seo said, "I hope with this gift that I will inspire other younger graduates to provide for Lewis through their wills. The Legacy Society is not just for older alumni, but can be an effective way for alumni of any age to help ensure the future of Lewis University." Dr. Seo is a Professor at Chicago State University and resides in Chicago with her husband Peter.

Remember Lewis in your Estate Plans

Lewis University is deeply grateful to those alumni and friends such as Dr. Byung-In Seo who have included the University in their estate plans, and invites others to consider joining this special group as members of the Harold E. White Legacy Society. Your support through a planned gift will enable the University to continue its tradition of providing a quality, faith-based education to future generations of Lewis students.

There are numerous ways to leave your legacy at Lewis through a planned gift. The following outlines some commonly used planned gift vehicles.

Bequest: The most commonly used and simplest form of a planned gift. Add a short provision to your will stipulating that Lewis is to receive a specified sum of money, specific piece of property, or a stated percentage of your estate.

Charitable Gift Annuity: For individuals 65 or older, gift annuities provide guaranteed, fixed and attractive payout rates for the duration of your life and significant tax benefits.

Retirement Plans: Name Lewis as the beneficiary of an IRA or other qualified retirement plan. A distribution to Lewis passes free of both income and estate tax.

Charitable Trusts: Individuals with greater wealth and more complex financial situations may wish to consider several forms of charitable trusts that provide tremendous tax and wealth transfer benefits, along with guaranteed income.

Contact Len Bertolini, Senior Development Officer for Major and Planned Gifts at (815) 836-5267 or at bertolle@lewisu.edu for notification purposes, or if you have any questions regarding how to include Lewis in your estate plans.

Fire Service Program to Go Online

The Bachelor of Arts program in Fire Service Administration will be offered online this spring in addition to its evening, classroom format. The program is designed for working firefighters and has received a great deal of support for its innovative scheduling. The program is currently offered so that firefighters, who work for three or four days at a time, can miss class on their normally scheduled night, and pick up the same class the following evening because the same class is offered on two consecutive days.

This degree program is part of the ongoing plan to put more of Lewis' degree programs online for working professionals who need the added convenience of the online format. Organizational Leadership (MA) and Information Security (MS) began the online format in August. Prior to that, the Public Safety Administration degree (MS) and Nursing (MS) were also offered online.

Flight Team Finishes in Second at 2009 Region VIII SAFECON

The Lewis University Flight Team took second place at the 2009 Region VIII SAFECON Competition. Lewis' Flight Team earned 70 points in the flight events and 63 points in the ground events, ranking number two in both events. The overall second place rank allows the team to participate in the 2010 National SAFECON Competition.

Held October 20-24 at Lewis University, the multi-event competition included six universities from the region. In addition to Lewis' Flight Team, teams from Southern Illinois University, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, Purdue University, Indiana State University and Middle Tennessee State University participated in the contest.

Lewis' Flight Team placed in the top 10 in all but one event. According to Keith McGill, Chief of Pilot Training at Lewis University, due to low clouds, each school only had two pilots compete in power-off landings instead of the normal five pilots from each team. High scorers for the team included Tom Muntzenberger, who placed first in pre-flight inspection and Andrew Wolanik, who took second place in both the aircraft recognition and pre-flight inspection events. Jared Hunt finished fourth in both aircraft recognition and power-off landings, while Thomas "TJ" Fogarty placed fifth in area navigation (RNAV), came in seventh in power-off landings and earned ninth in aircraft recognition.

Also placing in the top 10 in contest events were Aaron Brown, who finished 10th in E6B with Muntzenberger who served as his pilot, Tyler Dean who earned second place with Fogarty that served as his pilot. Chris Nocchi came in 10th in message drop with Jennifer Alicz as his pilot. Nicholas

Regional History Collection Re-dedicated

The Lewis University Canal and Regional History Special Collection was re-dedicated in honor of a husband and wife who contributed much to the preservation of their hometown of Lockport. The Lewis University History Center: Urban, Cultural and Catholic History of the Upper Midwest hosted a celebration unveiling the "The Howard and Lois Adelmann Regional History Collection" October 1 on the main campus. "This family has provided local and regional leadership and we hope to use their efforts as a model for us as this collection continues to grow in the future," commented Dr. Dennis H. Cremin, Assistant Professor of History and Director of the Center.

The collection contains more than 10,000 items; including books, manuscripts, photographs, and maps relating to the Illinois and Michigan Canal and the areas, towns, and activities it influenced in Illinois. The collection also features material about other American canals in the 19th and 20th centuries. This photograph collection is the largest existing pictorial record of the history of the Illinois and Michigan Canal.

Jerry Adelmann expressed his gratitude to Lewis University as well as his appreciation for the recognition of his parents' contributions. He also announced that he would begin to donate his Lockport photographic collection, which features many 19th century images, to the collection now named in honor of his parents. The Adelmann family members are descendents of the first permanent settlers of Homer Township.

More information on the collection can be found online at www.lewisu.edu/imcanal or in the Lewis University Library.

Lewis Students Get Life Lesson in Democracy

In July 2009, student aid funding for the Illinois Student Assistance Commission was reduced from $440 million to $220 million. This would result in approximately 138,000 Monetary Award Program (MAP) grant recipients only receiving 50 percent of their award. (It is estimated that another 130,000 eligible students, who applied after May 15, did not receive funding at all.) At Lewis, more than 1,000 students receive MAP funding.

The Lewis University Student Governing Board organized a MAP rally on October 14 in the Student Recreation and Fitness Center. It was a precursor to the statewide rally held October 15 in Springfield. The rallies were an attempt to raise awareness with legislators on the significant impact the elimination of the MAP grants in Illinois.

Phone lines and computers were available for students to contact their local legislative representatives. Several students, financial aid administrators and governmental leaders addressed the crowd of more than 200 people. Bashir Zayid, president of the Student Governing Board, introduced the speakers in addition to making his own pleas for support. He urged his classmates to attend the Springfield rally. He said, "We need this money for all of us!"

Brother James Gaffney, FSC, President of Lewis University, discussed the impact of taking away the MAP funds. He encouraged the crowd to contact their legislators. Mayor John Noak of Romeoville acknowledged that his college education is invaluable. He said the loss of funding for 138,000 college students in the state would have a devastating economic impact.

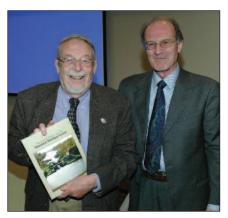

Gov. Patrick Quinn (D-Il.) and the state legislature have voted to restore the MAP funding for the spring semester.

Students log on to computers to contact their local legislative representatives during a Lewis University rally to save the Illinois Monetary Award Program.

Collection of Essays by Historian John Lamb Published

A collection of essays written by noted historian John Lamb, "Historical Essays on the Illinois & Michigan Canal," was introduced recently at Lewis University in Romeoville. "I hope it can energize further research on the I &M Canal and its impact in the area," Lamb stated.

An expert on the I & M Canal, Lamb is Professor Emeritus of History at Lewis. He is responsible for building an unparalleled collection of materials on canals that contains more than 10,000 items; including books, manuscripts, photographs, and maps relating to the Illinois and Michigan Canal and the areas, towns, and activities it influenced in Illinois.

Professor Lamb's new book was edited by Dr. Michael Conzen, Professor of Geography and Chairman at the University of Chicago. Dr. Conzen wrote a preface to the 126-page book and presented the first copy to Lamb. His students have used the regional collection for research on projects that have been admitted into the Library of Congress. "My students have been stronger as a result of John Lamb and the collection," he said.

"Professor Lamb has shared his passion for history with students, scholars and the public in more than five decades as an educator, historian, author and champion of the Illinois and Michigan Canal," commented Brother James Gaffney, FSC, President of Lewis University. Regarding the Adelmann Regional History Collection, Brother James continued, "Professor Lamb has demonstrated his selfless dedication to this scholarly and unique collection by volunteering his services after his retirement from the faculty of Lewis University in 1994 to continue managing and directing the collection, acquiring new materials, and opening it to the public and scholars worldwide."

Copies of the book are being distributed to many local libraries and are being displayed in the Lewis University Library. For information on how to obtain a copy, contact the Howard and Lois Adelmann Regional History Collection at (815) 836-5665.

History Students Participate in Burnham Centennial

Dr. Dennis H. Cremin, Assistant Professor of History and Director of the History Center: Urban, Cultural and Catholic History of the Upper Midwest, and the students of his Public History class conducted research for an exhibit showcasing the impact of Burnham and Bennett in Joliet that commemorated the Centennial of the 1909 Plan of Chicago. The "We Built This City: Burnham and Bennett in Joliet" exhibit opened in July at the Joliet Area Historical Museum.

The planning and growth of Joliet is the focus of the exhibit. A survey of Burnham buildings in Joliet and Bennett's 1921 Plan of Joliet are included. "Joliet has always had some type of plan, and has prided itself on creating a sense of urbanity," commented Dr. Cremin. He continued, "Bennett was hired to create this plan and then extend it into the future, and that vision still exists today." Along with illustrating the history of the Plan of Joliet, the Burnham and Bennett exhibit investigates how the community evolved, and how current city leaders are taking planning into the future.

"This is very exciting," commented Jason Kinnaman, a student in the Public History class. The Lewis University students conducted research, assembled exhibition notebooks, and drafted some preliminary text. He continued, "We are helping to create something that the community can find value in. We are telling a compelling story that will mean something to people."

"The students learned a great deal by working with professionals, such as Barbara Newberg, Joliet city planner and Heather Bigeck, Joliet Area Historical Museum collections and exhibits manager. Both provided key insight into the exhibit, but also what it is like to work in the field," commented Dr. Cremin.

Students involved in the project included: Candace Coop, Emily Custardo, Jason Kinnaman, Brian Tierney, Lauren Rizzo, Joshua Jacobson and Kyle Skager.

Record Number of Students Attend Si Se Puede Conference

On November 12, more than 550 high school students from across the Chicagoland area participated in Lewis University's Si Se Puede conference. This was the largest crowd in the history of the conference. The conference, which began in 2001, provides workshops on choosing a college, navigating the financial aid process and concludes with a motivational speaker and lunch.

In the spirit of Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta, who strongly believed in community empowerment, the Si Se Puede Conference serves as a beacon of hope for many Latino/a high school students whom would otherwise feel a college degree is not attainable. It delivers the message that "Si Se Puede," yes you can get a college education.

"This year, we had a record number of requests from high schools to attend our largest Si Se Puede Conference ever, which demonstrates the immediate need from the community to provide these type of motivational events for youth. No other university in the area provides such an inspirational conference to motivate Latino youth as the Si Se Puede Conference," said Martha Miranda-Villegas '98, Coordinator of University Ministry Outreach and Assistant to the Director of Multicultural Student Services.

Lewis University Opens New Site in Albuquerque

A new site was recently opened in Albuquerque at 2440 Louisiana Boulevard. The site will provide classroom space for adult students who are enrolled in Lewis University undergraduate and graduate programs. Lewis University began offering coursework at the Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque in August, and made the decision to continue to offer degree programs to continue the Christian Brothers presence in the region after the College of Santa Fe discontinued their programs there.

Faculty have been hired to teach business, information technology management and criminal/social justice. Additional faculty will be hired as decisions are made to bring various programs to the region.

Boeing Presents the Future of Aviation

More than 200 Lewis University students attended a presentation on the future of aviation during a September 29 aviation luncheon sponsored by Boeing, Chicago Area Business Aviation Association (CABAA) and Lewis University. Hundreds of aviation professionals filled the tables in the Lewis University hangar in Romeoville, offered their experiences and established mentoring relationships with the students.

Boeing representatives presented "The Future of Aviation" and discussed how they earned $60.9 billion in revenue from doing business in 90 countries in 2008. They also discussed the corporation's priorities, such as employee satisfaction, addressing environmental concerns and embracing diversity.

Bob Quinn of the National Business Aviation Association offered updates on the Transportation Security Administration's proposed Large Aircraft Security Program (LASP), Safety Management Systems, user fees and the "No Plane, No Gain" campaign discussed at a recent chief pilot"s roundtable in Washington, D.C.

Also adding to the educational aspect of the event was the landing of the "Black Sparrow" a Douglas C-47. A crew of eight officers from the Great Lakes Wing of the Commemorative Air Force provided tours and insights to interested individuals after the luncheon. The crew flew the aircraft to the Lewis University Airport for the day.

Faculty Member Inspires Students to Fulfill Their Dreams

Dr. Kimberly King-Jupiter, Associate Dean in the College of Education, provided the keynote address to more than 200 Chicago area high school students at the Fulfilling the Dream conference held in the Lewis fieldhouse. She has worked over several years to provide better education opportunities for African-American girls. She also was one of the founders of Sisters of the Academy.

The recipe for success included several pieces of advice. King-Jupiter encouraged her audience to first have a vision so a direction would be clear. She also urged the students to have passion. She said, "Be a beast at everything." She stressed the importance of a good support network. "Feed the mind with the right diet" is another piece of advice that King-Jupiter offered to her audience. King-Jupiter told the crowd, "The voices that motivated me the most were the ones that said I could not (achieve a particular goal)."

She stressed the importance of looking the part and added that it is important to dress for where one is going, not from where he or she has been. King-Jupiter challenged the students to go forward and, "Spend every second of every minute of every hour of every day making choices that will lead down the right path."

Online-Blended Learning Certification Workshops Held for Faculty

The increase in the number of distance learning courses at Lewis University mirrors a national trend. A recent report from the Sloan Foundation indicated that enrollment in online courses is growing faster than any other delivery mode. At the same time, research reported from the U.S. Dept. of Education indicates that online education is comparable to face-to-face learning in terms of content and quality.

To ensure that Lewis University's distance education course offerings maintain quality standards, a series of workshops to certify faculty in an online or blended setting were launched in June of 2009. Co-sponsored by the Office of Distance Education and Teaching Learning Technology Services, the summer 2009 workshops included two four-day workshops and an online version. Two more workshops were offered in the fall of 2009: a Monday night series and a blended option. By the end of the calendar year, approximately 100 full-time and adjunct faculty were certified.

Dr. Susan Sheffer, Professor of Psychology, characterized her experience with the workshop. "The Online Blended Teaching Certification Workshop has enhanced the learning experience for the students in my classes. I signed up for the workshop hoping to improve my online technical skills, but I gained so much more. The focus on using technology to enhance pedagogy has been invaluable in helping to maximize learning in my courses."

Dr. Valerie Hill, Assistant Professor of Psychology reiterated her feelings, "The workshop aided in my understanding of the wide variety of tools available for online/blended courses. I also realized that many of the tools (e.g. Wikis, Blogs) can be applied to enhance traditional face-to-face classes."

Neil Carey Arena Undergoes Major Renovations

Thanks in part to the success of the 29th Annual Lewis University Varsity Club Golf Outing and the Varsity Club membership drive, Lewis fans may not recognize Neil Carey Arena when they take in their first Flyer basketball or volleyball game of the 2009-10 school year.

Lewis Athletic Director Dan Schumacher said, "This project could not have been completed without the help of our alumni, sponsors and new revenue streams."

The first order of business for Neil Carey Arena was to provide fans with a more intimate atmosphere, so the upstairs seating behind the team benches have been removed. Those seats have been replaced with floor-level bleachers, complete with chairbacks, along with additional media seating.

The new seating arrangement for Neil Carey Arena allows for the Flyer Department of Athletics to open the "Lewis Varsity Club Suite" above the east side bleachers for donors, alumni and friends. A donation of $1,000 will secure two passes for every basketball game or volleyball match in addition to the regular Varsity Club benefits.

The suite features beverages and appetizers in the Seiler Room, where the game is viewed on a large projection screen and has that big arena suite 'feel'.

The "Lewis Varsity Club Suite" features tables and pub chair seating for a 'Bird's Eye' view of the court while enjoying food and refreshments.

'Press Row' has a new look on the sidelines, as Lewis has purchased three state-of-theart Daktronics Video Tables. These table displays show high resolution headshots and other quality images. These scorer's tables offer a high level of advertising and display flexibility with graphics and messages and can show real-time statistical information.

Brand new lockers have been installed in Neil Carey Arena, replacing 30+ year-old ones with professional style "open" lockers.

Contact Lewis Assistant Athletic Director Brian Summers at (815) 836-5228 or at summerbn@lewisu.edu for more information on how to enjoy the luxury of the "Lewis Varsity Club Suite", or sponsor a locker for $250.

Department of Athletics Announces 2009 Hall Of Fame Inductees

On October 3rd, the Lewis University Department of Athletics welcomed former softball player Carolyn Barraca (nee Early), baseball player Rick Ramos and women's volleyball player Connie Reedy as the newest inductees into the Lewis Athletics Hall of Fame as a part of Homecoming Weekend.

The trio was inducted prior to the Lewis/Missouri S&T women's volleyball match.

Early was a member of the Lewis softball team from 1985-88, where she helped the Flyers to three Great Lakes Valley Conference championships. During her career, Early batted .320 with 178 hits, 64 RBI and 112 runs scored. Her 178 base hits currently places her seventh in Lewis career history, while her 112 runs scored is fifth in the Flyer annals.

Ramos played a key role in helping the Lewis baseball team to back-to-back NAIA National Championships in 1975 and 1976. He currently sits second in Lewis school history with 39 career wins and was drafted by both the Seattle Mariners and Montreal Expos. He played five years in the Expos' minor league system and was named the club's Minor League Pitcher of the Year in 1979.

Reedy was a four-time All-GLVC selection for the Lewis women's volleyball team from 1983-86. In 1983, the Flyers took home the GLVC Championship, while Reedy was named team MVP in 1985 and 1986. During her senior season, Reedy totaled a school-record 107 solo blocks, a mark that still stands today.

The women's volleyball team finished the 2009 season ranked No. 9 in the nation.

Another Record-Setting Year For Women's Volleyball

Another year, another memorable season for the Lewis women's volleyball team.

The Flyers became just the third team since 2000 to go perfect in the Great Lakes Valley Conference, turning in a 14-0 conference mark. The run earned Lewis the regular season GLVC Championship. Lewis won 30 matches for the third year in a row, a first during the Division II era for the Flyers and a No. 2 seed in the Midwest Regional. The Flyers stayed hot in the Regional where they earned their second Sweet 16 appearance in three seasons by sweeping both Ferris State and Saginaw Valley State.

Senior Stephanie Sagat was named the GLVC Player of the Year, Lewis' first since 1989. In conference play, Sagat led the GLVC in kills per set (3.90) and ranked second in hitting percentage (.375) and points per set (4.21). During the season, she became Lewis' all-time career kills leader by finishing with 1,676.

Sagat and junior setter Rachel Ruedi earned All-GLVC First Team honors. Seniors libero Ashlee Lindish and middle hitter Sara deBuhr took home third team accolades. During the season deBuhr became Lewis' career leader in blocks (404) and recorded her 1,000th career kill. Lindish totaled her 1,000th dig.

The Flyers continued their impressive play at Neil Carey Arena, going a perfect 12-0 during the regular season at home. It's the second straight season Lewis has gone undefeated during the regular season at home. Lewis holds 58-3 record in Romeoville since 2006. Only one of three setbacks was a conference match.

The Flyers were guided by Head Coach Lorelee Smith, who took home GLVC Coach of the Year honors in her third year as a Head Coach.

Jessica McNamara

McNamara Earns All-GLVC Women's Soccer Accolades

Lewis senior defender Jessica McNamara became the first Flyer student-athlete to claim All-Great Lakes Valley Conference honors since midfielder Courtney Kettel received third-team accolades in 2007.

McNamara, who was a second-team selection, finished the season second on the team in goals, finding the back of the net three times on nine total shots.

McNamara recorded the game winning goal at Saint Joseph's and tallied scores against Northwood and Saginaw Valley State.

High Hopes For Men's and Women's Swimming Squads

Success at nationals is the goal for the Flyer men's and women's swimming program and Lewis Head Coach Steve Thompson is optimistic about both team's chances this season.

Last season Kevin Coates and Jason Ament qualified for nationals. Both return this season.

"We've had national success on the men's side and I want to continue that," Thompson said. "It is realistic to think we have the opportunity for all of our men to earn an NCAA A or B standard this season."

"On the women's side, we've brought in a nice freshmen class loaded with talent," Thompson said. "I think our top six to eight women are very balanced, so we're going to be more competitive in GLIAC and duals meets. I think we have the potential for a half-dozen women to earn some type of NCAA cut." Thompson believes it all starts with his seniors, his first recruiting class at Lewis, a group which has come full circle as they enter their final year. This six-member class is made up of Ament, Aaron Olszeski, Adam Olszeski, Ryan Harrison, Bridget Bettenhausen and Nicole Marano.

"Our seniors are the key to our success," Thompson said. "They have all scored at conference and all of the men have earned NCAA cuts. They are the foundation of this era in Lewis swimming and they are the picture of what we want for Lewis swimming. We expect them to step up and quide our team's success."

Kathryn Hague

Hague Earns All-American Cross Country Honors

Lewis junior Kathryn Hague became the first Flyer women's cross country runner to earn All-American honors in 12 years, as she turned in a 40th-place and season-best finish of 21:59.3 at the 6K NCAA Division II Cross Country championships, hosted by Southern Indiana, on November 21.

All individuals placing in the Top 40 receive All-American honors. Hague is the first Flyer since Malgorzata Biela, Magdalena Paszta and Kasia Arient accomplished that feat in 1997, to earn that distinction.

The Lewis men's soccer team celebrates their 'Elite Eight' win over Charleston (W. Va.) and their first trip to the NCAA Final Four since 2000.

Men's Soccer Earns 'Final Four' Bid For First Time In Nine Years

Despite a 1-2-1 start to begin the 2009 campaign, Lewis Head men's soccer Coach Evan Fiffles and his squad staved the course, as the Flyers went 15-1-1 over their next 17 matches, including a 4-1 win over No. 14 ranked Charleston (W. Va.) in the 'Elite Eight' to advance to the 'Final Four' for the first time since 2000.

Nestor Hernandez

Sebastian Kieruzal

Spearheading that run for the Flyers was the play of senior forward Nestor Hernandez, who earned All-Great Lakes Valley Conference First Team honors for the third-straight season and All-Midwest Region Second Team honors for the second-straight season. He led the Flyers with a career-best 14 goals. The Berwyn, III. native was instrumental in the Flyers' regional championship, as he totaled one goal and one assist on his way to being named the Region's Most Outstanding Offensive Player.

In his first season as the Flyer goalkeeper, Sebastian Kieruzal did not disappoint, as he posted 12 shutouts on his way to being named the GLVC Freshman of the Year. Kieruzal also was selected as the Most Outstanding Defensive Player of the Super 4 Regional Tournament.

Other Flyers receiving postseason accolades include junior defender Zac Bond (All-GLVC First Team, Super Region 4 All-Tournament Team, All-Midwest Region First Team), junior midfielder Mardoche Beya (All-GLVC Second Team, Super Region 4 All-Tournament Team), junior midfielder Jose Ibarra (All-GLVC Second Team) and Alex Koprowski (All-GLVC Second Team).

Youth Movement For Flyer Men's Basketball Team In 2009-10

Lewis University Head men's basketball Coach Scott Trost enjoys a challenge. For the first time in his last nine years as a head coach, his roster lacks a student-athlete that was a returning All-Conference performer.

Trost knows that he has a group of players that may not match the gaudy numbers put up by 2009 All-American Brandon Dagans and Lewis' all-time leading three-point shooter, Jason Genova.

The fourth-year skipper, however, believes that he has assembled a squad that has a bright future ahead of them.

"Our goals don't change. I expect us to Dennis Thomas come out, compete, and play very hard,"

Trost continued. "I think we have the makings of a good team."

One person that Trost can look to is junior guard and top returning scorer Dennis Thomas. As a sophomore, the 6-foot-2 guard averaged 10.2 points and a team-best 3.0 assists-per-game.

Marty Strus

Trost has the luxury of returning one of the top rebounders and shotblockers in the GLVC, in sophomore center Marty Strus will have to pick up the slack left by the loss of junior forward Lonnie Lawrence. Lawrence will miss the entire season due to a knee injury suffered during preseason practice.

As a freshman, Strus started in all 28 games and averaged 7.2 points and 5.9

rebounds-per-contest. He made his way into the Lewis record books as he set the single-season mark with 50 blocked shots and converted 64.3% (83-for-129) of his field goal attempts, which was the third-best in Flyer history.

Strus was not the only freshman to receive serious minutes in 2008-09, as both forward Matt Toth and guard Chris McClellan saw significant action as rookies.

Toth, who stands 6-foot-8, 245 pounds, averaged 4.0 pointsper-game in 11.4 minutes of action and shot a blistering 59.0% (49-for-83) from the field.

McClellan, a 6-foot-1 guard, averaged 4.6 points-per-game and shot a team-best 43.1% (22-for-51) from three-point range in '08-09.

Sophomore forward Justin Jarosz saw limited action as a freshman and averaged 1.6 points-per-game.

With a year of collegiate basketball under their belts, Trost believes the second-year transition is where most players make a significant jump.

"The biggest step people take is between their freshmen and sophomore year," Trost said. "That is when people make the most progress and we're going to need those kids, Strus, Toth, McClellan, Jarosz, to take that next step."

Amy Smith Named Semifinalist for Prestigious Wooden Cup

Senior forward Amy Smith is one of only 20 semifinalists for the 2010 John Wooden Citizen's Cup, an award given for the most outstanding role model among athletes and sponsored by the Athletes for a Better World organization.

The honor is given to a collegiate and professional athlete who has made the greatest positive influence in the lives of others. Founded by Athletes for a Better World (ABW), a nonprofit organization committed to changing the culture of American sports, the Wooden Cup is unique in that it is open to athletes in all collegiate and professional sports. Nominations come from every conference in the NCAA.

The five finalists are Division I athletes from the University of South Florida, University of Texas, University of North Carolina, Dartmouth College and Harvard University. Soccer player Mia Hamm is the professional honoree.

Smith, who is one of only four non-Division I studentathletes to make the semifinal cut, is a member of the Lewis women's basketball team. She's been a key reserve for four seasons and helped the Flyers to a conference championship in 2006-07.

She is a peer minister on campus, and started a studentathlete bible study group with sessions focused on applicable lessons for athletes. Through Campus Ministry she has raised donations for Misericordia Heart of Mercy, a local home for children and adults with developmental disabilities and volunteered at the Morning Star Mission food kitchen. She is also part of NCAA CHOICES, a program designed to decrease alcohol abuse on college campuses.

Smith spent the last two summers volunteering overseas. Following her junior season she worked for five weeks in Kenya. Among Sucre, Bolivia.

held workshops for the local teachers so they could better teach. Following her sophomore season Smith spent two weeks in Bolivia. Smith worked with the youth in orphanages and on the streets. They delivered donations of school and medical supplies and toys to the local hospitals, parishes, and communities of several projects, she taught 6-to-8 year old children science and

Following her graduation in May she will begin a 27-month commitment in the Peace Corps, teaching science and helping those in need in Africa.

Recipients of the Coach Wooden Citizenship Cup are chosen by a committee chaired by Vincent Dooley, former University of Georgia Athletic Director, and other distinguished individuals involved in athletics across the country.

Women's Basketball Shoots For Postseason Play In 2009-10

After a season in which the Flyers started three sophomores and a freshman, the Lewis 2009-10 women's basketball team now possesses a key element that can only earned on the court: experience.

The young Flyers lineup continued to mature as last season progressed, highlighted by an 8-1 stretch in Great Lakes Valley Conference play and a berth in the GLVC Tournament.

"I think the experience last year is definitely a motivational factor to get back to that point and not be satisfied," Head Coach Lisa Carlsen said. "However, all of last season was a great learning experience. We faced some challenges and some adversity and we bounced back. I think the team will tell you they learned a lot from last year."

The Flyers now enter the season looking to take the next step and qualify for the NCAA Tournament.

"I think it makes sense for us to be optimistic," Carlsen said. "We'd love to win a conference championship but we really want to make the regional tournament and get back on the national scene. I think we have a realistic shot at that." A big reason for Carlsen's sunny outlook is junior forward Jenny Turpel. The Johnsburg, Ill. native exploded during her sophomore season, ranking third in the conference with 18.5 per game. For her efforts she earned Daktronics All-Midwest Region Second Team and All-GLVC Second Team accolades.

She was also named to the All-GLVC

Tournament Team, thanks to a pair of impressive games in the postseason.

When discussing the Flyers frontcourt, redshirt sophomore Devon Carbaugh needs to come up in the conversation.

Following an injury during her freshman season, Carbaugh came back last year to start every contest and finish second on the team in scoring and rebounding with 10.8 and 6.4 per game, respectively.

Redshirt senior guard/forward Kelly Dianis missed the majority of the 2008-09 campaign due to injury. Back for one final season, Dianis is regarded around the league as one of the best shooters from the outside.

Redshirt junior Kelly Monaco stepped into a starting role last season following Dianis' injury. Monaco made her own name from long range last season, draining 71 3-pointers, tying for the second most in a single season in Lewis history.

Monaco and Dianis hope to be receiving many passes from junior point guard Kady Currin. The Cincinnati, Ohio native ranked sixth in the conference in assists last season with an average of 3.9 per game. She also took care of the ball, ranking eighth in the conference with a 1.43 assist/turnover ratio.

The hope is the returners will mesh with five new additions to help the Flyers reach their goal of a trip to the regional tournament.

"This group is poised to take the next step," Carlsen said. "We have a core group returning who understands where this program needs to get back to. It should be a fun year."

De La Salle Institute/Lewis Alumnus Reflects

The 2009-2010 school year marks 120 years of Lasallian education at De La Salle Institute. The following reflection about De La Salle was sent by one of our joint alumni. While each alumni memory may be different, there is a thread of commonality that a Lasallian education plays an integral role in the future success of its students.

I followed my brother, Clement – who graduated in 1934 – to De La Salle. It was a good choice. My mother and father were sending my brothers and sister to professional schools and money was tight, but the Brothers at De La Salle allowed me to attend De La Salle for half of the tuition.

For that, I helped out after school. I picked up litter, I cleaned the rooms and I learned about the white glove inspection from the Brothers.

Needless to say, I received an education from quality time in the classroom and valuable after school hours that helped me in pre-dental school in Loyola's physics and chemistry classes. I graduated from Loyola's dental school in 1946, practiced dentistry for 62 years and had my three children –

Larry, Bob and Marilyn - join me as dentists.

I received the best education during and after school at De La Salle and for that, I am deeply grateful. I am sure that the Christian Brothers of De La Salle are proud of all the graduates.

Dr. Lawrence Michet - 1941

and Lewis alumnus. Dr. Michet
